Why It Matters

Financial struggles are pervasive across diverse user groups and income levels, primarily due to fragmented literacy and inadequate guidance.

Current tools often compound these issues, limiting true financial growth and well-being for non-expert users.

46%

struggle with comprehensive financial planning and long-term money management.

72%

Limited financial literacy across different income groups hinders smart decisions.

High Cost

Personalized financial advisory services are often expensive and out of reach.

Complex Tools

Existing financial tools can feel overly complex for non-expert users.

Student

"Hard to balance expenses and savings"

Government Employee

"Unsure about taxes and retirement planning"

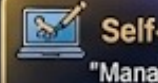

Corporate Worker

"Income exists but financial growth feels unclear"

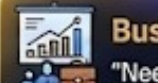

Farmer

"Irregular income makes planning difficult"

Self-Employed

"Managing business and personal finances together is challenging"

Businessman

"Needs smarter financial insights and forecasting"

Generic financial apps

Too many options

Complex interfaces

Low personalization

Poor long-term planning

People need simple, personalized and language-friendly financial guidance — not complicated financial systems.
